NATIONAL CENTER FOR HIV, VIRAL HEPATITIS, STD, AND TB PREVENTION

NCHHSTP Career Opportunities

CDC's National Center for HIV, Viral Hepatitis, STD, and TB Prevention \(NCHHSTP\) is committed to achieving a future free of HIV, hepatitis, STDs, and TB, with the goals to reduce incidence of infection, morbidity and mortality, and health disparities. The Center is also committed to the protection and improvement of health among all youth through supportive school, home, and community environments. We offer a wide range of careers, including jobs in public health, medical epidemiology, research, data science, infectious disease prevention, information technology, business and public policy, data management, and communications. Interventions developed by NCHHSTP support the actions of policy makers, scientists, physicians, teachers, and others entrusted with safeguarding the health of Americans. Examples of work includes:

- Improving infectious disease outcomes and linkages to care, particularly in disproportionately affected communities.
- Partnering with federal, state, and local partners to end the HIV epidemic and reduce HIV transmission.
- Working to combat STDs, tuberculosis, and viral hepatitis.
- Disease surveillance and responding to outbreak investigations
- Addressing community health by developing and supporting harm-reduction strategies such as syringe services programs \(SSPs\).
- Supporting teachers and school systems and with classroom management skills and strategies to increase school connectedness, improve mental health, and strengthen STD-prevention among teens.

NCHHSTP's vision is for a future free of HIV, viral hepatitis, STDs, and TB, as well as developing effective, inclusive, and stigma-free public health interventions. Consider joining our team!
